IMPRS for Heart and Lung Research

International Max Planck Research School

PhD Program at the Cutting Edge of Life Sciences
The IMPRS for Heart and Lung Research aims at educating a new generation of scientists in the field of cardiovascular and lung research. Our goal is to train in basic and medical science. Physicians will enhance understanding of comprehensive systematic work; basic scientists will develop expertise in patient-oriented scientific approaches. Students will have the chance to explore research projects at the edge of cardiovascular research applying state-of-the-art techniques.
